3. The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance: there was no prior art found that teaches or suggest as plurality of inherently flame resistant fibers, defined by the Textile dictionary as cited by Applicant in their response dated 12/12/2003 wherein the fiber itself and not a coating makes the composite into which it is formed is flame resistant to which is added a finish which imparts a separate property of being antimicrobial or soil or fluid repellant. The closest prior art is that of Rubin et al. as cited in previous actions however the fibers of Rubin et al. themselves are not "inherently flame resistant fibers."
